Philippe-Joseph BROCARD (1831-1896)

"Restorer and collector of works of art, Philippe-Joseph Brocard studies the enamelled decoration of glass in order to repair and copy Islamic models present in the great collections of the time and visible during the Universal Exhibitions. He is considered as the renovator of the technique of 14th century Arab enamels. From 1867, he sometimes signed and dated blown glass objects which he decorated with painted and fired polychrome enamels."

Notice Museum of Decorative Arts Paris.

Brocard's works are present in many museums including those of the Museum of Decorative Arts and Musée d'Orsay in Paris and The Victoria & Albert Museum London.
